	yes, some surprises. I'm absolutely baffled why my son's pen licence has been withdrawn and that he isn't on target as per your marking. I've asked to speak to his teacher and still haven't received a response. My son is a brilliant student, also indicated in his report so not sure why his English has been marked down.	I'm very pleased with my son's report but have my concerns as mentioned above.	the report was well presented, detailing what I needed to know.	not really, for my son who will be sitting SATs in September, parents should be given some guidance on how we can support children in areas highlighted in the report.	pupils who are achieving high. how's can my son be that good in maths and had no recognition for it. My son has incredibly neat hand writing, taking away a bright child's license due to spelling and	parents should be given appropriate and flexible time options to speak to teachers about reports and not only in the middle of the day as was the case this year. we work full time and have diary commitments that are not easily moveable. guidance on how parents can support children as highlighted in reports should be provided

	I was abit shocked by the levelmy son scored with his reading as I feel he's done amazing this year with his ready and scoring a 1-2 is poor for the level I believe he can read at. Also his attendance has been mentioned multiple times on his report which apparently has effected his leaning ability.
